FRANK JAMES BELIEVED DYING

Only He and Cole Younger are Now Alive of the Notorious Gang--Related to Kentuckians.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 21st Frank James, one of the James brothers, notorious as highwaymen shortly after the civil war, was stricken with heart disease and was reported dying at his home near here. He is 73 years old.

James is one of the last surviving members of the band robbers made famous by an almost unparallel career of crime during the days of reconstruction. He has been living the life of an ordinary farmer for more than thirty years. James is the son of a clergyman. His mother was a native of Scott co., Ky. He joined Quantrell's guerrillas in the Civil War together with his brother Jesse, and took part in the sacking of Lawrence, Kansas.

When the war came to an end they were hunted far and wide by relatives of those who had met death at their hands. They soon became outlaws. Many crimes of the decade following the war have been laid at the door of the James-Younger gang, of which the only members surviving Frank James and Cole Younger, who is now living at Lee's Summit, Mo. —Lexington Leader.

REPUBLICANS ARE CHEERFUL

Mr. Long Sends Letter to Mr. Franks on Result of Campaign.

THINK RESULTS GOOD

Roasts Democratic Tariff and Quotes A. O. Stanley on Legislation in State

Below will be found the text of a letter addressed to Mr. E. T. Franks, the chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in Kentucky, by Mr. Geo. W. Long, who managed the recent Republican campaign in this State.

Mr. Long writes, it is stated, from the standpoint of the men in charge of the Republican party in this State, and puts the interpretation on the returns from the election that are accepted by the leaders of his party Mr. Long's letter follows:

November 9, 1914.
The Hon. E. T. Franks, Chairman Republican State Central Committee, Owensboro, Ky.

My Dear Franks—The candidates to whom the Republican party committed its banner in August, returned it to the people on the evening of November 3. "Victory" was not written upon its face, but "inspiring" illuminated every fold. It was borne honorably by every candidate and no taint of double dealing mars its beauty and symmetry. In 1915 it will wave in triumph over the State House at Frankfort, and in 1916 from the dome of the Capitol in Washington.

I wish I could name the public speakers and local workers who aided your committee in its work. The Republican press deserves special mention. Without means to aid them in the fight, we appealed to them not in vain. Their work was unselfish and most invaluable. Now that the party has become a united and militant force, they should not be forgotten or neglected.

In returning to you the commission of commander-in-chief of the Republican forces in the campaign just closed, it may not be amiss to make a brief statement.

Sees United Party

We entered the contest knowing that our party was disorganized, disheartened and without hope of success. You will now find it practically united and with their faces turned hopefully to the future. The things that divided us—representation in national conventions without votes to justify it, the use of the official pressure at Washington to secure delegates, and decisions in contests without regard to the State laws under which delegates are chosen—have been corrected by our national committee and the reasons for the unfortunate division no longer exist. The minor things out of which ambitious leaders strive to make an issue, will not be taken seriously by the great body of our former associates who voted against the Republican ticket in 1912, because they could not approve party management, as then conducted, and not because they opposed the fundamental principles and governmental policies of the party.

The decisive victories won at the polls Tuesday, Nov. 3 in the great agricultural and industrial States, notwithstanding frantic appeals to stand by the President because of his peace policies, emphasizes the fact that the present administration is still a minority administration. It does not reflect the will of the people, but of only a fraction and a section. These victories hearten our people and assure us that the national campaign of 1916 will again return to power the party that legislates for the farmers, laboring people and business interests of the United States.

Scores Democratic Tariff

Five times has the Democratic party enacted into law a "tariff for revenue only" measure following a protection statute and good times, and five times have idleness, financial distress, bankruptcies, failure of revenues and increased charity work followed. Twice foreign wars have come to the aid of the Democratic administrations and put off the evil day by lessening foreign production and giving our home workmen employment in consequence. But on the former occasion, the volcano was only smothered and it belched forth with intensified fury when the war ceased and the productions of underpaid foreign labor displaced the products that should have been made by domestic labor. No man posted in the financial and industrial history of this country, and whose mind is not warped by academic free trade theories, doubts that the flood of importations sure to follow the close of the present European war will sweep out manufacturers into bankruptcies, further derange our finances and throw out of employment other millions of laboring men. This will lessen home consumption and adversely affect every class of farmers.

Quotes A. O. Stanley

The condition of the State is most deplorable. A few days ago there was outstanding a debt of more than $2,983,000, represented by warrants upon which the people are taxed to pay at the rate of $149,000 a year in interest. Every known thing which can be taxed is covered by State and national assessments, and our tax values are forced up every year by percentages without regard to the injustice done those who make fair returns of their property. State legislation is controlled, according to Mr. Stanley and other Democratic authorities, by insidious lobbyists, who dictate the filing of legislative offices, direct the formation of committees and control the action of our Legislatures.

Without a political upheaval, the people cannot remedy this, because legislative districts are so gerrymandered that voters in some portions of the State have five times as much power as those in others. Nor can this be excused, as is done on suffrage questions farther South, on the ground that negroes are not to be allowed to control our affairs, because it is in precisely those sections where the negro is most numerous that the voting power in legislation is greatest.

The Liquor Question

For years the Democratic party in Kentucky has played shuttlecock with the liquor question—proclaiming temperance from the housetops and making secret deals with those who control the business. This year was not an exception to the rule. Ministers and other good people unused to the devious ways of some politicians have unconsciously lent their aid in tethering their own hands and will find when too late that some whom they trusted to further national prohibition will "uphold the hands of the President" who declares that this is a question for the States to settle and when they appeal to the State Legislature they will find that the lobby has taken care of this matter in the selection of committees from which no resolution submitting the question to the people will be reported ed in time for legislative action. Nobody has a just right to complain of the liquor people for protecting themselves. But the people should reckon with the double dealing politicians who secure offices by false pretenses.

It is not often that we can so heartily agree with Marse Henry Watterson, but the following dissertation from him on the Bull Moose is so good that we cannot refrain from giving our readers the benefit of it. The article is as follows:—

The Bull Moose stands half way between Hell and the Iron Works, the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea. Thus he can swim or eat live coals, as the case requires, be a woman or a man at will.

In the North he is a dissatisfied Republican, in the South a disgruntled Democrat. In Louisiana one might call him Old Sugar-in-the-Gourd, in Pennsylvania, the Ho-Goat of the High Tariff. In Roosevelt he is Masculine, in Perkins, Feminine and in Pinchot, Neuter. He is all things by turn, and nothing long, his votaries worship at the shrine of Teddy of the Forked Tongue and the Tiger Heart, whilst Teddy rides him for all he is worth.

During fifteen years, all saw-dust and spangles, it has been nip and tuck between Mr Bryan and Mr Roosevelt while could bawl "Reform" the loudest, preach "Uplift" the slickest—the one parading as the "Prince of Peace," the other prancing at Armageddon, fighting the battles of the Lord—the two of them turning the political arena into a circus ring and teaching the young to grovel at the shrine of the knifeswallower, the bearded lady and tattoo-man.

A REQUEST

Our correspondents are requested to send in their matter not later than Wednesday of each week, as we cannot get these matters in when received on Thursday, or Friday morning.

The "Holy"
Roman Fraud

The coming of the mystery of iniquity, Paul predicted, should be no merely with "all power," but with "signs of lying wonders." Could language more accurately describe the countless relics which Rome's votaries venerate?—"Lying wonders." Without attempting to furnish a complete list—the here catalogue would make a large octavo volume—we present a few, enough to determine the character of all.

The early Christians, it would seem, must have been particularly careful to preserve the bones of their dead. In the Cathedral of St. Peter, at Rome, they have an arm of St. Lazarus; a finger and arm of St. Ann, the Holy Virgin's Mother; and the head of St. Dennis, which he caught up and carried the distance of two miles after it had been cut off. In France they have four heads of John the Baptist. In Spain, France and Flanders they have eight arms of St. Matthew and three of St. Luke. In the Latern Church, in Rome, they have the entire heads of St. Peter and St. Paul; and in the convent of the St. Argentinians, at Bilbao, the holy monks have a large part of Peter's head, and the Franciscans a large part of Paul's. At Burgos the tail of Balaam's ass, a part of the body of St. Mark, and an arm and finger of St. Ann. At Aix-la-Chapelle they have two teeth of St. Thomas; part of an arm of St. Simon; a tooth of St. Catherine; a rib of St. Stephen; a shoulder blade and leg bone of St. Mary Magdalene; oil from the bones of St. Elizabeth; bones of Sts. Andrew, James, Matthias, Luke, Mark, Timothy and sacred relics that Rome has FIVE legs of the ass upon which our Savior rode into Jerusalem.

Nor are the bones their only precious mementoes. In almost every chapel in Europe may be found pieces of the cross on which our Lord was crucified. If these were all collected, no doubt they would furnish an amount of material equal to that contained in one of the largest dwellings in America. In Rome they have also the cross of the good thief; also the entire table on which our Lord celebrated the Paschal Supper. And a recent publication, "The Living Eucharist Manifested by Miracles," assures us "that it is the true table of the Lord, that on which the world's Redeemer and God, Jesus, offered the first eucharistic sacrifice." And on the same authority we learn that at the cathedral of Valencia, in Spain, they "the way in which His blood was first laid, [the chalice elevated from the table of his divine hands." "At St. Mark, in Venice," says the same author, "the knife used by our Lord in TOUCHING not CUTTING, the bread, is exposed each year, on Holy Thursday for the veneration of the faithful." Even the old room, that very upper chamber in Jerusalem, in which our Lord wrought that miracle of miracles, transubstantiating the bread into his actual flesh and blood, is even now, "retained in a tolerable state." Fearing that no Protestant can possibly believe men so credulous, and that my honesty in reporting these "lying wonders" may be called in question, I refer the reader to the little tract published in London, A. D. 1869, written by George Keating, "The Living Eucharist Manifested by Miracles." Here he will find what is enough to make one shudder with horror as he contemplates the abyss of superstition into which papists have fallen.

And they have yet more wonderful mementoes than bones and wood. In more than one cathedral they have specimens of the manna of the wilderness, and a few blossoms of Aaron's rod. In Rome they have the very ark that Moses made, and the rod by which he wrought his miracles. At Gastonbury they have the identical stones which the devil tempted our Lord to turn into bread. In another of their chapels they have the dice employed by the soldiers in casting lots for the Saviour's garments.

They have St. Joseph's axe and saw; St. Anthony's millstone on which he crossed the sea; St. Patrick's staff, by which he drove out the toads and snakes from Ireland; St. Francis' cow; St. Ann's comb; St. Joseph's breeches; St. Mark's boots; "a piece of the Virgin's green petticoat; "St. Anthony's toe-nails; and "the parings of St. Edmund's toes."

Then, also, there are in their convents, all carefully suspended from the walls, most precious relics preserved in hermetically sealed bottles. There is a vial of St. Joseph's breath, caught as he was exercising himself with the very axe and saw now in their possession. There are several vials of the Holy Virgin's milk; and—will you doubt it, poor deluded Protestants?—A small roll of butter and a little piece of cheese made from her milk. They have also hair from the heads of most of their saints, and twelve combs, one from each of the Apostles, with which to dress it. And what is a little marvelous, these combs are declared to be "nearly as good as new."

To end our enumeration of her sacred relics; they have a small piece of rope with which Judas hanged himself; "a bit of the finger of the Holy Ghost;" the nose of an angel; "a rib of the word made flesh;" "a quantity of the identical rays of the star which led the wise men to our infant Savior;" Christ's seamless coat; two original impressions of his face on two pocket handkerchiefs; a piece of the very same porphyry pillar, on which the cock perched when he crowed after Peter's denial; and even the comb of the cock; and then the pearl of the entire collection, one of the steps of the ladder on

ing. A recent traveler to Rome not merely saw these wonders, but was considerably and affectionately told that inasmuch as he was a "devout man," he could obtain a small portion of these precious relics at a moderate price.

He was offered a feather from Gabriel's wing for twenty-five cents. From the book, "Popery," by VAN DYKE.

CONCEIT

NOTE—Last week the composition from the First Year High School as you probably noticed were on "Sowing and Reaping." The first was written by Hester Walker, the second by Rees Golden.

The subject this week is CONCEIT. There is a tendency in human nature to be vain or self conceited and each of us need to be on our guard so we want to overcome by it, a conceited or vain person is self conceited and filled with pride, and we are told in God's eternal word that the pride of life is not of the father, but of the world.

The self conceited person is narrow in mind and in soul, to be able to see the world in all of its beauty as well as in all its needs, we must rise above self, and place our affection upon these things that are higher and nobler. The facts is if we should make a through study of our selves and compare ourselves by the laws of God we would soon see that there is not much about us to be boasting about, for when we begin to think we are something we wake up to the fact that we are nothing.

Paul tells to be careful for when we think we stand we are sure to fall. Peter had great confidence in himself and his ability to stand after assuring his Master that he would never desert him, but when the test came we see Peter following Jesus afar off and warming by the enemy's fire, and then denied Jesus because a little girl accused him of being one of his followers.

So if Peter, one of Jesus truest and best disciples fell because of self conceit, we should all be very careful that we don't fall too.

Myra Amis

Conceit is an over estimation of ourselves and it is something that everyone should guard against in every day life.

If a man is conceited he thinks he knows it all it all and his mind is not open to conviction.

It should be a man's aim in life to make progress and if he is conceited he is well satisfied with himself, and does not care to let other people teach him.

A conceited man is a nuisance to society, no person can express himself in his company without hearing this egotistical fellow pour forth a volume of words as if he were an authority on every subject from Astronomy to Zoology. For we are told in Proverbs 26:16 "The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven wise men that can render reason."

A conceited man lets little knowledge deceive him, and a drink from the fountain of knowledge blinds him. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Humbleness is a trait that is admired in anyone, and that should be sought after by all.

It is good and right to know that now; but to only think we know leads us to many a fall, and often to destruction.

If we could only know of all the things in the world that we know nothing about, the few little things that we do know would be far from ever leading us into conceit, for the knowledge of our own ignorance would keep us humble in our mind.

Let us day by day fill our store houses with knowledge but each day that we work let us remember that there is so much more yet to learn that we could never be found over estimating ourselves, for we are told in Proverbs 28:11 "The rich man is wise in his own conceit; but the poor that hath understanding searcheth him out."

Prevent Pipes From Freezing

Many water pipes were frozen during the cold snap last week, and as a result many plumbers were worked overtime in an effort to fix up the damage caused by the freeze-ups.

Every year this section of the country experiences at least one cold snap and as a result hundreds of dollars are expended each year in thawing out pipes and fixing bursted water lines.

J. O. Mink in an article in the Country Gentleman gives a simple means of preventing water pipes from freezing and it is strange that the plan was never used in this section of the country.

He says: "Each winter for several years I was given all kinds of trouble and extra work with water pipes being frozen as soon as the weather went below the freezing point. After much experimenting I finally hit upon the easiest, most inexpensive and surest way to keep the frost off the pipes. I have recommended it to many persons, who have tried it and found it saves many repair bills."

Melt an equal quantity of petrolatum—vaseline—and paraffin wax together and, after wiping the pipes perfectly dry, apply with an old brush a thick coat of mixture while hot with an old brush, an oil lamp or a torch will easily keep it in a liquid state.

You will find that no matter how cold the weather may get the frost cannot penetrate this coat of grease. I have used this on water pipes that ran along the ground unprotected, and not once during the coldest weather did they freeze up or give me the least trouble.

Our Eastern Possessions.

(Ewell V. Osborn.)

Having heard much comment by various people about the Philippine Islands, some praising Uncle Sam for getting hold of such possessions, while others who are pessimistic say that the Philippines ought to have been left alone. As it makes us in more danger in case of war with Japan, and I hear many other things both pro and con, that I feel I ought to say something in regard to such discussion and give things just as they are, and as I am not a professional writer I will tell my tale in my own way, and let others decide whether or not we should keep the Philippines.

The natives did not like us very when we first went to the Islands for the Spaniards had told them that the American Yankees were more brutal and blood thirsty than Spanish ever dared to be, and the people who had been subject to the tyrannical Spanish rule, were really afraid that the Americans would exterminate them and take all their possessions.

But when the Filipinos in the civilized portions of the Islands found out why we came to the Philippines, that we were to be the "Good Samaritan" and rescue them from the cruel Spanish rule, and to upbuild and educate them, and at some future date, when efficient, to give them their own freedom and independence. Then the people became more friendly toward us every day.

There are some uncivilized and barbarous tribes in the mountain parts and on some of the Southern islands and they equal to about 10 per cent of the total population, and such tribes as the Igorots and Moros, who eat dog meat as their choicest food, and worship Mohammed as a deity, never have been at peace or under control, and in fact never will be until they are annihilated. But of such tribes I will speak of them later on in another narrative. So now I will write about the civilized and peaceful population which are the Filipinos proper and those of Spanish decent.

Near the camp where I was a soldier was a broad stretch of level land about fifteen or twenty miles wide, back of this lay a mountain range. It was very densely populated in the level part and of course agriculture was the chief industry and the native farmers would bring to our camps all kinds of fresh vegetables fruits and several different varieties of fish which they would sell very cheap.

We could buy all the bananas we could eat for "una centavo" (one cent) or a whole bunch for "una

Then there would be some that would remain green on the outside. When ripe the fruit is dark, but has a fine flavor, in fact they are so rich that three or four is all that a person can eat at one time.

They had various kinds of melons, but none that we are familiar with in the United States. They have some that are long and taste like our musk melon, otherwise the melons have the flavor of the American gourd, with the exception of the "hermosa" which looks like a cantaloupe, but grows on a tree instead of a vine. They grow near the body of the tree, and a ring of them encircles the tree, then about two feet another ring encircles the tree, and so on until the top is reached, and this "hermosa" or cantaloupe is very rich and spicy.

The coconuts grow in abundance and there are groves in all the surrounding country, and on our reservation were many hundred coconut trees, and the nuts are large and nice, and some of the soldiers had tame monkeys to get the coconuts down with. The monkeys would climb the trees and throw the nuts down as fast as they could bite the stem that held the nut, and in case there was no monkey the natives are good climbers. The natives have a way of tapping a coconut tree near the top and a juice will run out called by them "tubig" which looked and tasted a little like beer, but smelled like hamburger cheese. The native would collect the juice from the coconut tree like a Kentuckian would collect sugar water from a sugar maple.

During harvest time the natives work hard all day gathering rice and at night would pound it in a wooden trough to remove the hulls. Of course there are mills or factories where the rice is pounded by machinery. The people raise sugar cane and make a great amount of sugar. Large quantities of sweet potatoes are raised. The native farmer digs over his sweet potato patch about once in two or three months and it is always summer there, and a farmer never has to reset his "dulse comata" patch.

Tomatoes and beans, lettuce and radishes, and different kinds of greens also raised.

There are many extensive coffee plantations, the coffee grows on trees like cherries, each coffee berry contains two grains of coffee. They are picked off the trees and cured in the sun.

The New Wet and Dry Line-up

As a result of the November elections there are now fourteen states in the dry column. They are Arizona, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia.

There remain 15 states in which half the population live in so-called no-license territory. They are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Vermont.

There remain eleven states in which 25 per cent of the population lives in no-license territory. They are California, Delaware, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming. At different times in the past 23 states have adopted the policy of prohibition. All but nine for one reason or another, abandoned it for local option or control by license.

California and Ohio, out of the six states in which statewide prohibition amendments were voted on this fall, elected to remain in the wet column. In Ohio the new amendment to the constitution practically places the state in the wet column forever, as it provides that no new liquor legislation shall be introduced into the legislature. The present laws, however are very strict and are carried out to the letter. The new amendment does not prohibit the holding of wet and dry elections in communities, under the laws that are at present in force.

The states that have voted dry during the year 1914 are Arizona, Colorado, Oregon, Washington and

Man Killed By Train

Last Saturday, Chester Barton, Alias Brogans, was run over by a freight train near Grays Station. It is said that the man was drinking some, and was going south from Grays, firing a pistol a long on the tracks of the L & N, and as the train approached him he stepped in front of it and before the engineer could shut off the steam the engine struck him and run over him cutting him into about the hips, he died instantly. Big Doings in Masonic Lodge

Last Monday night Mountain Lodge No. 187 F. & A. M. held their Regular Communication with a good attendance, with work in second and third degrees. This Lodge was set to work in August 1848 and was granted a Charter August 29, 1849, at that time the Regular meetings were for the Second Saturday and Fourth Monday in each month, which has never been changed, for a time they met in the Court House, then rented buildings until 1889 when they built the Hall now owned by the Odd Fellows. In 1910 they built the Temple that adorns the northeast corner of Public Square, they figured it to cost $4,500 but upon completion it was found that it has cost $8,077.27, which put the Lodge in debt, but on last Tuesday morning the last cent of the indebtedness was paid and the members are now arranging for a Big Banquet and Dedication, of the New Hall on Wednesday, Dec. 16, 1914, at which time it is expected that the Grand Master, Grand Secretary and others will be present and take part in the exercises.

TOO MANY CHILDREN

are under-size, under-weight with pinched faces and poor blood; they do not complain but appetite lags, they have no ambition and do not progress.

Such children need the rich medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion above everything else; its pure cod liver oil contains nature's own blood-forming, flesh-building fats which quickly show in rosy cheeks, better appetite, firm flesh and sturdy frames.

If your children are languid, tired when rising, catch cold easily or find their studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion; it supplies the very food elements that their systems lack.

Scott's Emulsion contains no alcohol and is so good for growing children it's a pity to keep it from them.

Children's Kidneys

No Barbourville Mother Should Neglect the Little One's Health.

Often weak kidneys cause a great annoyance and embarrassment to children. Inability to control the kidney secretions, at night or while at play, is attributed to carelessness and too frequently the child is punished. Parents having children troubled with kidney weakness would do well to treat the kidneys with a tested and proven kidney remedy. If there is pain in the back, discolored urine, irregular urination, headaches, dizzy spells or a tired, worn-out feeling, try Doan's Kidney Pills at once. This remedy has been used in kidney troubles for over 50 years and has been recommended by thousands. Convincing proof of merit to the following statement. It's from a resident of this locality:

Mrs. Nora Burns, Cumberland Ave., Pineville, Ky., says: "My little boy had been afflicted with kidney trouble for a long time and was so bad that I was worried. He had little or no control over his kidney secretions and this difficulty was a source of annoyance. Nothing seemed to be of any permanent benefit until I finally decided to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. They cured him and I am glad to say that the cure has been permanent."

Price 50 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Burns recommends. Foster-McMurray Co., Prop., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

Significant Facts and Pertinent Questions

The first convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress was held in Baltimore in 1901, after a Rivers and Harbors Bill had been talked to death. The Eleventh Convention is to assemble in Washington following a filibuster in the Senate which cut the appropriation in the 1914 Rivers and Harbors Bill from more than $53,000,000 down to $20,000,000.

The striking and significant feature of the situation, however, is not the reduced appropriation for the present fiscal year, but the violent attack—the "Declaration of War"—which has been made, both in the Federal Congress and by a portion of the press, on the policy of waterway improvement.

Senators and Representatives in Congress, Army Engineers, commercial organizations (sneeringly referred to as "Booster Clubs,") waterway association, the very people of the United States—all who favor the improvement of our rivers and harbors—have been held up to scorn as criminals who are trying to loot the public treasury.

One Senator denounced "the wastefulness and the folly of Congress in seeking to promote a system of transportation which, save in very exceptional instances, is obsolete and of no value to the people" (Cong. Record, 63rd Congress, 2d Session, page 16007) because "there are others cheaper and more efficient methods of carrying the products of our farm and factory to market" (Cong. Record, 63d Congress, 2d Session, page 12319.)

Does this not mean, if it means anything at all, that an absolute monopoly of inland transportation should be handed over to the railways of the United States?

James J. Hill says in a recent article ("Forward St. Louis," Oct. 19 1914) that it would have required the expenditure of more than billions of dollars seven years ago merely to put the railways of the United States in condition to do the business then offered them; that an enormously greater expenditure would be needed now; and that to imagine the amount needed can be secured "when there is such a poverty of capital as there will be for ten, twenty, possibly more, years to come, is absurd."

If there is no possibility that the railways can be put into condition to handle the traffic offered them for twenty years to come, will not exclusive dependence on railway transportation, hopelessly cripple the commerce and industry of the United States?

Since time began no other nation has made so swift an advance in industry and commerce as has the German Empire. With an area 53,000 square miles less than that of Texas and a population 30,000,000 less than that of the United States, Germany, in 1912, had a foreign commerce greater than that of this country by more than $818,000,000. The fundamental reason for this startling difference is to be found in the German waterways. In the midst of the greatest war in all history, the statesman of Germany are not only maintaining and operating the waterways they already have, saying that they consider it of vital importance to do so, but are actually building more!

Evidently the statesmen of Germany do not consider water transportation obsolete.

One metropolitan newspaper declared that "Congress is dishonest and the Army Engineers are tainted." Certain Senators objected to the exertion of influence in favor of waterways by commercial organizations and waterway associations, and the paper already referred to goes still further and advocates the appointment of a Commission which shall have plenary powers to say what shall or shall not be done with the waterways of the United States.

Why stop with waterways? If the people of the United States are incapable of managing their own affairs why not abolish the Republic and establish an absolute monarchy?

The same paper declares that tolls should be charged for the use of all waterways and harbors and that no waterways should be improved unless it is certain that the tolls collected will pay dividends on the cost. Every dollar added to the cost of transportation by water will allow the addition of an equal amount to charges of transportation by rail. In improving waterways, as in building highways, governments are seeking not dividends but development.

Is there any argument for the establishment of tolls on waterways which would not apply with equal force to the re-establishment of tolls on highways?

Active work was begun by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in 1906. This work consists entirely of a campaign of education—the presentation of facts to show the benefits produced by improved waterways. As a result of the nation-wide campaign carried on by this organization, aided by the work of waterway associations formed to promote particular projects, public sentiment in favor of waterways was created which has been reflected in the action of the Federal Congress. Rivers and Harbors Bills are now passed every year instead of once in three years; appropriations for waterways have been largely increased; and in 1912 legislation was secured which opens the way for constructive cooperation between railway and waterways, instead of the destructive competition which has been the rule. Such cooperation would multiply the benefits of improved waterways and extend them to every part of the country.

With the increase in appropriations, promising the completion of a national waterway system, and with the new later giving water transportation a chance for its life, towns and cities began the building of public terminals and new steamboat lines were organized.

Is it a mere coincidence that a violent attack has been made all along the line just when the restoration of traffic to our waterways is on the verge of accomplishment?

Economy of transportation is the chief factor in the prosperity of cities, states and nations. The cheapest of all transportation is water transportation. The improvement and utilization of the waterways and harbors of the United States is of vital importance to the future of our country.

Are the people of the United States to be allowed to have such improvement of their waterways and harbors as they want and are willing to pay for?

The Eleventh Annual Convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress ought to be sufficiently large and sufficiently representative of all parts of the country to give an answer to that question and to other questions related thereto.

The National Association for the study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has secured from 2,582 clergymen, representing 1,608,000 communicants, information regarding the number of deaths from tuberculosis among their parishioners during the year ending August 31 and the number of living cases in their parishes.

3,794 deaths and 4,254 living cases were reported; an average of nearly three cases of consumption cared for by each congregation that reported. As the average size of the congregation is 56, evidently there is one case of tuberculosis developing for every 20 church members in the United States.

Because so much relief is demanded for consumptives from the churches the National Association, the Kentucky Tuberculosis Commission and the local associations laboring for the public health all over the State are urging all ministers to observe Tuberculosis Day the week of November 20th.
